Promoting Singapore's Global SchoolHouse Initiative

Applications made easy

In line with Singapore's aim to be a regional education hub, the Immigration and Checkpoints Authority (ICA) has introduced a variety of initiatives to facilitate applications by foreign students for student passes here. One of these is SOLAR+ – an internet portal which allows foreign students to apply for permission to change schools online, without having to physically approach various stakeholders to complete different parts of a student pass.

Previously, if students wanted to change schools, they had to obtain endorsement from their local sponsors, and the old and new schools. The local sponsor/agent would submit the application, after completing documents, at ICA's Visitor Services Centre.

ICA took about five days to process an application. So all up, it might have taken a student two weeks to obtain the necessary endorsement/signatures, submit them and obtain approval.

With SOLAR+, turnaround time has been slashed. Students who want to move from one private school to another need only submit an online application form.

Vela S, from Stamford School of Commercial Studies :

"The SOLAR+ system is definitely helping us to cut down on paperwork and is more effective in monitoring the progress of the student pass application. Moreover, with the system, students and their parents/guardians are able to track the progress of the application. This helps to expose rogue agents who time and again try to..."

Mr Stephen Ng , from Cardiff Learning Centre:

"Other e-Govt services in Singapore such as OBLs and GeBiz received the UN Public Service award in 2005 and 2007 respectively. We think ICA's Solar+ should be nominated for the next award. Don't think UK, US or other countries have such system yet."
